Maintaining a lush, green lawn all starts with fertilization. The right lawn fertilizer can do wonders for any lawn, transforming it in no time at all. Yet finding the right blend of fertilizer and determining how much you should use can be confusing. What lawn fertilizer to use? When to fertilize? How much fertilizer? The truth is, lawn care is a science.

When individuals try to fertilize their lawns on their own, this complexity can lead to frustration and errors – neither of which ends up producing a great result. Even worse, individuals often end up using too much or not enough fertilizer, costing time and money, and leaving your lawn looking worse than it did when you started. In the end, this frustrating trial and error process will often end up costing you more than it would have cost to hire professional help in the first place.
