Flying Pest Control in the Beehive State

In the spring, as evening temperatures rise, Utahns are beginning to enjoy our time outdoors. The problem is that so are the mosquitos. When evening temperatures reach 50°, female adult mosquitos will begin to lay eggs and previously laid eggs begin to hatch. As the thermometer rises, so will mosquito's hunger. Professional outdoor bug and flying pest control will allow you to spend time outdoors in peace.

The most effective outdoor control treatment in Utah includes monthly applications to suppress populations for 3-4 weeks at a time. While it is impossible to fully eliminate every outdoor bug or flying pest, it is possible to keep the population down in your outdoor space. Professional treatment begins with addressing the current population and then maintaining the area by repelling new larvae as they hatch.

Your summertime pest control specialist will target the following outdoor areas to infiltrate the places where flying pests like to hide, like:

- Trees & Shrubs in Your Yard
- Bark or Mulch in Flowerbeds
- Outdoor Potted Plants
- Around the Deck & Patio

After treatment, you will see a significant reduction of mosquito and black fly activity in your yard for 3 to 4 weeks. Big League Lawns guarantees service for flying pest control after 2 separate applications.
